Citations from work performed on Santa Rita Experimental Range: 1951-present.

Compiled by M.P. McClaran. Last update 03 November 2015

1951

1968

1977

1978

1980

1982

1983
1984

1985

1986
Cox, J.R., Madrigal, R.D., and Frasier, G.W. 1986. Survival of perennial grass transplants in the Sonoran Desert of the Southwestern USA. Arid Soil Research and Rehabilitation 1: 77-87

1987

1988

1989

1990

1991

1992

1993

1994

1995

1996

1997

1998

1999

2000

Womack, J.D. 2000. Mortality and sprouting vigor of burned and cut velvet mesquite (Prosopis velutina Wooten): The role of basal diameter and number of stem. MS Thesis, School of Natural Resources, University of Arizona, Tucson.

2001

2002

2003

2004

2005

2006

Huang, C. 2006. Understanding the ecological complexity of semi-arid savannas using remote sensing. PhD Dissertation. School of Natural Resources, University of Arizona, Tucson, AZ.

2007

2008

2009

2010

2011

2012

Bruegger, R. 2012. Use of targeted grazing in Arizona to accomplish rangeland management goals and herder observations of indicators and causal factors influencing rangeland change in Mongolia [thesis]. Tucson (AZ), USA: The University of Arizona. 117pp.

Dalke, A. 2012. Native and introduced grasses have different response to livestock, mesquite and soil texture. MS Thesis, School of Natural Resources and the Environment, University of Arizona, Tucson.

2013

2014

2015

In press